Jane Castor, Mayor

WHEREAS, the city of Tampa, Florida boasts excellent weather and numerous waterways for experienced and novice boaters to enjoy what our community and state offers, which makes for an unparalleled boating experience; and

WHEREAS, Florida has the second longest coastline in the United States of America, at nearly 1,200 miles, making boating a popular water sport for residents and visitors alike, and with approximately 931,450 registered boats in the state, waterways can become congested and present a greater safety risk; and

WHEREAS, for nearly 100 million Americans, boating continues to be a popular recreational activity, and according to the latest United States Coast Guard statistics, drowning across the nation is the reported cause of death in approximately 71 percent of all boating accidents, and of those, 84 percent of the individuals were not wearing life jackets; and

WHEREAS, although boating is a wonderful form of water recreation and an important industry with an estimated $121.5 billion economic impact nationally and adding approximately 472,000 jobs, remaining aware of the dangers involved in boating is important, and boating safety is crucial to ensuring the waterways remain a safe place of relaxation and enjoyment; and

WHEREAS, the National Safe Boating Council (NSBC), a coalition of more than 500 national and international organizations established in 1958, and the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary stress the importance of operating watercraft in a smart and safe manner, and to strive to ensure that parties are taking all necessary safety precautions including the storage and use of life jackets, recognizing that hundreds of lives could be saved each year if more boaters and their guests would wear these life-saving devices; and
